Knowledge Exchange Workshop: Who Cares? Writing about Your Research for the Non-Specialist
October 23, 2018 (Tuesday)

The Knowledge Exchange Office of HKU asked our Publisher and Director, Mr Malcolm Litchfield, to give a workshop on writing about research projects for non-specialists. Since it can be very difficult for academics to step back from their research, the participants were grateful to hear practical and useful guidelines for writing descriptive copy, abstracts, or summaries that engage and draw in potential readers.

British POWs sank with the Lisbon Maru — should it be raised?

A story on The Sinking of the Lisbon Maru
BBC News
14 July 2018

A Chinese film-maker wants to raise a Japanese ship that was sunk in 1942 with hundreds of British prisoners of war on board. Some of the victims' families back the idea, but one of the survivors says it's a war grave, and should be left where it lies.

"We knew we'd been hit by a torpedo. And the ship started listing. That was it," says Dennis Morley, now 98 but then a 22-year-old in the Royal Scots regiment.

In total 828 POWs died either on board or in the waters nearby, according to Tony Banham, author of The Sinking of the Lisbon Maru: Britain's Forgotten Wartime Tragedy . . .

China just asserted its hold over the South China Sea. Will ASEAN nations push back?

By Daniel C. O'Neill
The Washington Post
October 15

Dramatic U.S. Navy pictures recently showed a Chinese navy ship maneuvering within 45 yards of the USS Decatur. The U.S. destroyer was conducting a FONOP, or freedom of navigation operation, in the South China Sea near reefs that China has converted into artificial islands.

China claims "indisputable sovereignty over the South China Sea Islands and the adjacent waters." Rival claimants include Taiwan, Vietnam, the Philippines, Malaysia and Brunei. All but ASEAN are members of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN), an organization that promotes "peace, security and stability" in the region. . . .
