Notes on Contributors

Tun-jen Cheng is Associate Professor of Government at the College of William and Mary, Williamsburg, Virginia. He has published extensively on the political economy and democratic changes in newly industrializing countries in East Asia, including Newly Industrializing Asia in Transition and Political change in Taiwan (co-authored and co-edited with Stephan Haggard) (Boulder, CO: Lynne Reinner, 1992).

Yun-han Chu is Director of Programmes at INPR, Professor of Political Science at National Taiwan University, and co-ordinator of the Political Science section at the National Science Council. He is author of Crafting Democracy in Taiwan (1992), and editor or co-editor of Consolidating the Third Wave: Themes and Perspectives (1997), The Predicament of Modernization in East Asia (1995) and The Asian Regional Economy (1993).

Jürgen Domes is Professor Emeritus and until 1997 Director of the Research Unit on Chinese and East Asian Politics at the Saar University, Saarbrücken. He is now Director of the Institute for Relations of Europe with Non-European Areas at the European Academy, Otzenhausen, Germany. He has published many books and articles on the PRC and the ROC in academic journals over the last 30 years.

Teh-fu Huang is Professor of Political Science and Director of the Election Studies Centre at the National Chengchi University, Taipei. His most recent book (in Chinese) is The Democratic Progressive Party and Political Democratization in Taiwan. His research interests cover the theories of comparative politics and democratization.

Christopher Hughes is Lecturer in International Relations and Politics of the Asia-Pacific at the University of Birmingham, and has recently published Taiwan and Chinese Nationalism (London: Routledge, 1997). He is currently working on the relationship between Chinese nationalism and globalization, with a special focus on the emerging links between mainland China, Hong Kong and Taiwan.

I-chou Liu is Associate Professor of Political Science at the National Chengchi University. He has published many articles related to generational issues in politics, public attitudes to the unification/independence issue and electoral behaviour in Taiwan.

Françoise Mengin holds a doctorate from Institut d'Etudes Politiques de Paris, and is a political scientist at the Centre d'Etudes et de Recherches Internationales (CERI), Fondation Nationale des Sciences Politiques in Paris. She has published widely in French. Her research interests include politics in Taiwan and relations across the Taiwan Straits.

Chyuan-jenq Shiau is Professor of Political Science at National Taiwan University and Director of the Department of Public Policy and Administration, National Chi Nan University. He has published widely on the politics of Taiwan.

Hung-mao Tien is President of the INPR and a national policy adviser to President Lee Teng-hui. His publications include Government and Politics in Kuomintang China 1927–37 (1972), The Great Transition: Social and Political Changes in the Republic of China (1989), Taiwan's Electoral Politics and Democratic Transition: Riding the Third Wave (1996) and Consolidating the Third Wave Democracies: Themes and Perspectives (1997).

Steve Tsang is Louis Cha Senior Research Fellow at St Antony's College, Oxford University, and Director of its Asian Studies Centre. His publications include Hong Kong: Appointment with China (1997), Government and Politics: A Documentary History of Hong Kong (1995), In the Shadow of China: Political Developments in Taiwan since 1949 (1993) and Democracy Shelved: Great Britain, China and Attempts at Constitutional Reform in Hong Kong (1988).

Laurence Whitehead is Senior Fellow and Official Fellow in Politics at Nuffield College, Oxford University. He was jointly responsible for the Wilson Centre's project on Transitions from Authoritarian Rule and Prospects for Democracy in Latin America, published in four volumes in 1986. He is currently editing a series of studies in democratization by Oxford University Press, of which the first volume, International Dimensions of Democratization, edited by himself, was published in 1996.

Ching-hsin Yu is Research Associate at the Election Studies Centre at the National Chengchi University, Taipei. His current research is focused on Taiwan's democratization and political participation.
