Preface

The present directory serves as a basic guide to library and information services in Hong Kong. It is an updated edition of my three earlier works. The first edition was published in 1963 entitled Libraries in Hong Kong: A Directory, providing information on 215 libraries. Encouraged by its success, subsequent editions were published in 1975 (Library Services in Hong Kong: A New Directory, listing 317 libraries) and in 1988 (Library and Information Services in Hong Kong — co-editors: Angela S.W. Yan and Grace H.L. Chu — listing 602 libraries).

Since its first edition, the directory has undergone extensive revisions, expansion and improvement. Following research, the number of libraries listed in the present volume has expanded to 763. There are additional entries in virtually every category of institution, reflecting the enlarging and rapidly increasing importance of library and information services in Hong Kong. The greatest expansion is in the health science field (from 11 to 24, an increase of 118%), followed by theological libraries (from 9 to 16, an increase of 88%), and school libraries (from 299 to 432, an increase of 45%).

Within the short span of about eight years, amalgamation, changes in names and responsibilities can be seen in a number of organizations and institutions which will have impact on the library scene. The five colleges of education: Sir Robert Black, Bonham, Grantham, Morrison and Northcote Colleges of Education have been merged to become different campuses under the Hong Kong Institute of Education in 1995. Automation and reorganization in these libraries are underway in an effort to provide more efficient library service to staff and students of the Institute. Hospital Authority, formerly Hospital Services Department under the Medical and Health Department, was set up in 1990 to take charge of all the hospitals in Hong Kong and professional librarians are appointed for the first time to most of these hospital libraries to better serve the needs of health care personnel.

In the higher education sector, the Hong Kong Polytechnic, the City Polytechnic of Hong Kong and the Hong Kong Baptist College all attained university status in late 1994 and have since changed their names. Advancement in scholarship in the past few years has led to the expansion of existing academic programmes and the establishment of new ones. The number of students pursuing higher education has increased tremendously, both in the undergraduate and postgraduate levels. This, coupled with the progress in research, has placed new demands on library collections and services. Significant development occurred in the academic libraries to cope with the changes. The University of Hong Kong Main Library added a large new extension in 1991, more than doubling its previous floor area. The Chinese University of Hong Kong and the Hong Kong Polytechnic University also acquired extensions to their libraries in 1994, while the City University of Hong Kong Library in 1989, the Hong Kong Baptist University Library in 1995 and the Lingnan College Library in 1995 moved to new and expanded premises. A new university library, the Hong Kong University of Science and Technology Library, was opened in 1991. These college and university libraries are well equipped with modern computer technology for information storage and retrieval.
A feature of this new edition is the inclusion of updated information on electronic databases and resources, computer systems and networks which reflects the current trend in the information services and library scene. We see the increasing importance of electronic collections and a high level of awareness of the potential of computer and communication technologies.

While the 1988 edition saw the beginning of the establishment of electronic collections and integrated library systems in academic libraries, the present volume witnesses the continuation of the same trend in libraries of all types, and in addition, the growth of networks. Approximately 50% of the libraries in Hong Kong have installed automated library systems. Besides the university libraries, the Regional Council Public Libraries (1994) and Urban Council Public Libraries (1995) recently implemented the Dynix Library System. Other libraries with automated library systems include 32 community centre libraries, 4 general libraries, 19 post-secondary college libraries, 9 theological libraries, 26 government departmental libraries, 14 health care libraries, 53 special libraries, and 2 club/society libraries. Among the 432 school libraries, 148 have installed computerized library systems, either developed in-house or purchased from vendors. Quite a number of school libraries, though not yet automated, reported that they are in the developmental stage of automation.

To facilitate interlibrary resources sharing and cooperation, HARNET (Hong Kong Academic and Research Network) was established to facilitate interlibrary access to information among academic libraries, HALIS (Hospital Authority Library Information Systems) was set up to connect the various hospital libraries, and the HKIS (Hong Kong International School) Academic Network efficiently links up its primary, middle and secondary school libraries. The Urban and Regional Council Public Libraries are also connected via the Dynix Library System. On the international scene, about 6% of the libraries in Hong Kong have access to Internet communications and resources. Electronic mail, Internet, World Wide Web are used extensively in academic institutions and libraries.

This publication represents the collective efforts of many people. My acknowledgement goes to Ms Julia Chan for her time and dedication towards the completion of the project, to Mrs Angela Yan for reviewing and proofreading the data, and especially to all those librarians who responded readily to our questionnaires for their cooperation and support in providing us with the information necessary for the compilation of the directory.

The publication of the directory could not have materialized without the financial support of the University of Hong Kong Libraries and the Hong Kong Library Association. The Asia Foundation generously funded the printing cost of the first edition in 1963 and supported the second edition. The cost of the third edition was covered by the Hong Kong Library Association through sales of the second edition. For the present volume, due to the escalating cost of production, the University of Hong Kong Libraries needed to provide financial assistance by contributing to more than half of the expenses.

The directory is published for the Hong Kong Library Association by Hong Kong University Press. Through the persistent voluntary work of the University Library staff — from collection and inputting of data, to compilation of the directory, in the present as well as all the previous editions — the University of Hong Kong Libraries again demonstrates its continued support of and contribution to the Hong Kong Library Association.

Introduction

Scope

The directory records information on 763 libraries in Hong Kong, listing 53 community centre libraries, 62 general and public libraries, 27 post-secondary college and university libraries, 16 theological libraries, 432 school libraries, 50 government departmental libraries, 24 hospital/medical/nursing libraries, 95 special libraries and 4 club/society libraries. There has been an increase of 161 libraries listed as compared to the previous edition.

The directory does not claim to be comprehensive in its coverage. A few libraries have not been included at their request. There was a reluctance of some libraries to supply details and some entries contain more information than others.

In addition to the telephone number, the majority of the entries now contain a fax number and where applicable, electronic mail address which will facilitate rapid transmission of information among libraries and institutions.

Compilation

In October 1994, questionnaires were sent or faxed to every library listed in the previous edition and various other sources. For those libraries who had contributed to the previous edition a copy of their previous entries was supplied for amendment and addition; to prospective new entrants sample entries were sent for general guidance.

Information in the directory has been compiled from the returned questionnaires or direct telephone contacts with those who did not respond to the initial questionnaires. The final deadline for collection of data was September 1995.

Approximately 750 questionnaires were sent out. More than 98% responded, many with enthusiasm for the project. The response to the questionnaires is gratifying, which indicates that the directory has achieved a high level of respect among libraries and information services in Hong Kong.

Arrangement

This new edition follows the arrangement of the previous edition. The structure remains the same. The main body consists of a single alphabetic sequence of entries for the various institutions, with a classified section at the end. Each entry follows a standard format except where specific details were not provided.
Acknowledgement

The Editors wish to express their gratitude to all those people who helped in the compilation and production of the directory. We thank the staff of the University of Hong Kong Dental Library, especially Peter Wong, Diana Tsui and Juana Li, for their valuable assistance in the preparation and inputting of data. Above all, our appreciation goes to those librarians who responded so promptly to our questionnaires and who kindly forwarded relevant information; without their cooperation the publication of the directory would not have been possible.
